The Lammas Hireling by Ian Duhig

After the fair, I'd still a light heart and a heavy purse, he struck so cheap.
And cattle doted on him: in his time
mine only dropped heifers, fat as cream.
Yields doubled. I grew fond of company that knew when to shut up. Then one night, disturbed from dreams of my dear late wife,

I hunted down her torn voice to his pale form.
Stock-still in the light from the dark lantern,
stark-naked but for one bloody boot of fox-trap,
I knew him a warlock, a cow with leather horns.
To go into the hare gets you muckle sorrow,

the wisdom runs, muckle care. I levelled and blew the small hour through his heart.
The moon came out. By its yellow witness
I saw him fur over like a stone mossaing.
His lovely head thinned. His top lip gathered.
His eyes rose like bread. I carried him in a sack that grew lighter at every step and dropped him from a bridge. There was no splash. Now my herd's elf-shot. I don't dream but spend my nights casting ball from half-crowns and my days here. Bless me Father for I have sinned.

It has been an hour since my last confession.
